Driven By Justice, Defined By Results

Barket Epstein Kearon Aldea & LoTurco, LLP, has built a dedicated team of distinguished lawyers fueled by a passion for justice. The firm's highly skilled lawyers comprise a unique blend of backgrounds: a former judge, former prosecutors, public defenders, a federal law clerk and New York State Bar Association past president, the current president of the New York State Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, an executive producer for an ABC docuseries about the death penalty, and nationally recognized experts in vehicular crimes, appeals, civil rights, and criminal defense.

From their offices in the iconic Empire State Building to their Long Island locations, they are strategically positioned to serve the entire New York metropolitan area. With strong ties to the bench and bar, founding partner Bruce A. Barket says,

"We pride ourselves on our ability to navigate complex legal matters, from wrongful convictions, civil rights violations, criminal defense, and personal injury to commercial litigation."

They harness the collective expertise of a team which has yielded an impressive record of acquittals and appellate victories, many covered by the national media. Barket Epstein also boasts that they have won the freedom for six individuals who were wrongly convicted and imprisoned and who are now on The National Registry of Exonerates. "It takes a collaborative, creative approach to create a winning strategy," says Barket.

Being able to skillfully resolve matters in their client's favor is a product of the respect they have earned throughout the state and their ferocious advocacy if litigation is necessary. "We aren't afraid to fight," says Barket, "we enjoy it."

They have earned over $50 million in civil judgments in the last six years for those injured by the government or private parties.

"We define the quality of our work based on the results we achieve for our clients," says Barket.
